EDUCATION

One of the high costs of higher education you don't hear mentioned much is the high cost in losing good craftsmen.

The "everybody-goes-to-college" philosophy puts vast numbers of high school graduates with no definite aims in, for instance, college business administration courses. The major result may be the loss of a lot of good auto mechanics, carpenters, television repairmen and so on.

The sorry part of it is that only a small percentage of business administration graduates will ever do much real administrating. It will be apparent to those wielding promotion powers that most of them aren't really good administrators. And even for those who are, the room gets scarcer and scarcer toward the top of the pyramid.

Successful administrating is in good part a knack, a gift. One might be able to memorize the whole kit and kaboodle of textbooks and still strike out on the job. Four years of academic effort, or coasting, doesn't produce an executive in the great percentage of cases.

The fact is, an overwhelming percentage of students with adequate brain power, finances and sticktuitiveness to get a college diploma wind up in routine jobs for the rest of their careers when, with a good deal less strain, they might have become skilled in a needed craft better suited to their actual interests and capabilities. And have earned more money at it.

But in the updating of the "anybody - can-grow-up-to-be-president" American Dream, the idea now seems to be for everyone to have a crack at becoming chairman of the board.

It's not only an impossible, but a costly dream. —Benton Courier

The beauty of nature

Silhouetted by a setting sun, three egrets provide living ornaments for a large tree. Egets, cormorants, and cranes abound in certain areas of south Arkansas, and a Star photographer recently captured some of the birds on film. (See more photos on page 4.)

Nixon expected to act on Soc. Sec. measure today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has disregarded warnings that President Nixon might veto a 20-per-cent increase in Social Security benefits and has sent the measure to the White House.

Nixon was expected to act on the bill before leaving today for a two-week stay in San Clemente, Calif.

The Senate and House acted Friday night before recessing until July 17 for the Fourth of July holiday and the Democratic National Convention.

The Social Security measure, the biggest money increase in the program's history, was tied to a bill extending the $450-billion debt ceiling through October. Without such action, members were told, the government would have to stop paying its bills by Thursday.

Also included in the hybrid measure—and increasing the difficulty Nixon would face in vetoing it—are provisions for future automatic Social Security increases to cover cost-of-living rises. It also includes procedures by which those who suffered from the floods of Hurricane Agnes and the earlier disasters in South Dakota can get prompt tax refunds.

The bill would make the 20 per cent across-the-board increase in Social Security payments effective in September. It would be reflected in checks received Oct. 3.

Republicans, who vainly sought to cut the increase to 10 per cent as Nixon recommended, accused Democrats of playing politics with the measure.

Nevertheless, the Senate approved the boost, 82 to 4, and the House, 302 to 35.

Payroll taxes would be increased in 1973 and again in 1974 to finance the higher benefits.

From $9,000 this year, the base would go to $10,800 in 1973 and $12,000 starting in 1974.

The maximum tax a worker pays this year if $468. The maximum, for a person earning at least $10,800, would go to $594 next year and, for a person earning at least $12,000, to $660 in 1974.

Employers pay a matching amount.

Memories reopened as families bury Marines

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a hillside at Arlington National Cemetery, World War II's sorrowful memories are being reopened for the families of five Marines who gathered to bury their sons and brothers killed nearly 30 years ago at Guadalcanal.

Today's funeral services answered the plea of Mollie Johnston of Littleton, N.C., mother of one of the Marines, to bring her son's body home "if it takes a hundred years to find him."

About 40 surviving relatives were expected to attend the funeral, but not Mrs. Johnston. She died a few years ago.

The remains of the five Marines lay in lost, unmarked graves on the Pacific island battlefield until they were discovered in 1970.

The five, among nine Marines killed by Japanese small-arms fire on Oct. 9, 1942, were identified as Pfc. David W. Johns, of Johnstown, Pa.; Pfc. Eugene Johnston, Littleton, N.C.; Cpl. John F. Suggs, Richlands, N.C.; Pvt. Paul E. Gagnon, Augusta, Maine, and Pfc. Godfrey E. Hunter Jr., Winston-Salem, N.C.

They were members of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 7th Marines, 1st Marine Division, on a six-day sweep from the Matanikau River to Point Cruz on Guadalcanal's northern coast.

Because of the heavy fighting, the Marine Corps said, eight of the Marines were buried where they fell.

A Marine spokesman said artillery barrages and the rapid jungle growth hid the grave sites and only three of the eight were later found by the graves-registration service. They were brought home for burial.

The families of the remaining five were notified of their deaths but told the bodies could not be found. In a letter to the commandant of the Marine Corps in 1946, Mrs. Johnson pleaded: "I want him brought back if it takes a hundred years to find him."

In 1970, Mrs. Y. Timothy Kwaimani, wife of a forestry official on Guadalcanal, found the skeletal remains of an American serviceman and the identification tag with the name: "G.E. Hunter, 131427, U.S.M.C."

Peace talks are delayed

SIMLA, India (AP) — Indian and Pakistani officials delayed their peace talks today and prime Minister Indira Gandhi's chief negotiator was hospitalized with heart palpitations.

Helicopters brought a team of heart specialists to this 7,200-foot-high Himalayan hill resort to treat D.P. Dhar, leader of the Indian team of officials trying to work out an agenda for talks between Mrs. Gandhi and President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Dhar was stricken about 2:30 a.m. Doctors said there was no cause for anxiety, and Bhutto visited him for about 10 minutes.

Dhar is chairman of the Foreign Office's policy planning committee, and his illness was a personal blow to Mrs. Gandhi. She had relied heavily on his advice on foreign policy in the past year, and he headed the Indian delegation which arranged with the Pakistanis to hold the Simla summit.

Biggest 'treasure' is being priest

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Twenty years ago today, the Rev. Theodore Martin Hesburgh became president of Notre Dame University. Since then he has served as an adviser to presidents, become an international public servant, received nearly 40 honorary degrees and won the Medal of Freedom.

But to the 55-year-old former gas station attendent his greatest treasure is his office as priest:

"I can't think of a time when I didn't want to be a preist, this means more than anything else to me," Father Hesburgh said in an interview.

In his 20 years as president, Notre Dame's students have changed, the campus has changed, and Father Hesburgh has changed.

"The students have changed because the world has changed," Father Hesburgh said. "But I think they have come through it surprisingly well, despite all the problems they have faced—the war, the draft and poverty."

Father Hesburgh, who was a student at Notre Dame when "the kids wore hobnail boots," has walked the tightrope of student turmoil.

In 1969, he warned students that disruptive protests would not be tolerated. However, he supported nonviolent protest.

Again in 1970, the tightrope grew taut during the U.S. incursion into Cambodia.

At a mass meeting, he came down hard on the war in Southeast Asia. The result was students gathered 26,000 signatures on an end the war petition, instead of burning buildings.

The campus has changed with an increase in enrollment from more than 2,500 to some 8,200. It consists of 75 buildings, a third of which have been built during his era.

When asked how he has changed, Father Hesburgh replied, "I think I have tried to keep on top of the times. I try to seek new opportunies and I try to understand the kids most of all. When I was younger I believed the answers were all black and white, but not any longer."

He has drawn national attention as chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. The priest-educator is the only surviving member of Dwight Eisenhower's 1957 original appointments to the advisory group to the president.

This post, as much as being president of the university, has put him in the spotlight on social and moral issues. He has been the subject of criticism from both liberals and conservatives.

"I like to think I am conservative in values and liberal in the way of achieving those values," Father Hesburgh said. "I am liberal about justice and civil rights and the future of the country."

Beer can bumpers for auto?

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Beer can bumpers for automobiles?

About 40 University of Arizona engineering students have combined 20 used beer cans with $2 worth of lumber to develop a bumper they say will leave cars undamaged in collisions at five miles per hour.

"Admittedly it's not very attractive, but I think people are beginning to be more willing to buy cars that aren't necessarily attractive, but are safer and more practical," Lawrence Scott, chief adviser to the students, said Tuesday.

The cans on the test car still contain labels and the wood is unfinished, but Scott said he expects cosmetic improvements later.

The cans are sandwiched lengthwise between two pieces of lumber and, Scott said, can be attached to conventional cars to replace original bumpers.

Fireworks will cause injuries

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of persons are injured each year in fireworks accidents despite strict state laws which have reduced fatal mishaps almost to zero.

This Independence Day will be no different, according to the National Safety Council which predicts that hundreds of injuries will result from use of bootlegged fireworks around July 4.

The council says many otherwise law-abiding citizens ignore the laws, which cover more than 60 per cent of the population, and bring fireworks into a state or municipality which has banned their possession, sale or transportation.

The laws have succeeded in cutting the death toll from 466, tabulated by the American Medical Association in 1903, to none in recent years.

The AMA says another contributor to the absence of deaths is the fact that Americans take to the roads in automobiles on holidays instead of staying home and shooting fireworks.

The council says that bootleg users find a black market connection or bring fireworks from some rural area where they are sold in the open.

Mail-order chemical kits, containing potentially explosive chemicals, are available through magazine ads even though they are illegal, the council observed.

Deuel Richardson, a spokesman for the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) in Boston, says that although the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has banned Class B explosives, it still allows use of Class C fireworks which carry a warning note.

Class B fireworks include cherry bombs and some types of aerial bombs and rockets. Class C fireworks are small firecrackers and nonexplosives such as sparklers and snakes.

"We are still puzzled by the attitude of the FDA in allowing Class C fireworks," Richardson says. "It has taken the position that as long as these fireworks carry a warning label, they are not harmful to children."

"We doubt very much," he says, "if any 6-, 7-or 8-year-olds pay any attention to warnings on small firecrackers."

Phil Dykstra, manager of the council's home department, says even Class C fireworks are dangerous and destructive enough to warrant banning of all fireworks except those used for licensed public displays.

He cites a study made jointly by the NFPA and the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness which showed 42 per cent of fireworks accidents resulting in personal injury and-or property damage were caused by Class C fireworks.

Arkansas FOOTPRINTS

By GEORGE SMITH

Memories are like shadows — sharp and distinct one minute, faded and gone the next.

Conjuring up memories is an art that requires concentration and a memorable "happening."

The Meadow Muffin War was such a happening.

The problem of diversified recreation in any small town is a reality. City kids can go to the zoo or a movie or to a park, but for teen-age ruralities, the choice is limited. After going swimming or fishing in a lily-pad choked pond, playing Tarzan in a barn loft, trying to rope chickens and riding calves, what else is there to do?

In the Sutton community in Nevada County where I was reared, there were approximately 15 youngsters. As a group, we regularly visited the old swimmin' hole with its muddy water and muddier water snakes, played softball in the Bennett cow pasture, went to revivals in the one-room, shingle-sided Nazarene Church, went on treasure hunting forays in the nearby pine forest, and periodically searched for the graves of seven bandits who were lynched by a local vigilante committee about 1880.

When there was nothing else to do, we played Kick the Can, or went hunting with B-B guns or walked the three miles to the fire lookout tower or begged a ride to the Crossroad Store and purchased a red coke, a moon pie and a peanut rounder. Or we chunked rocks at fence posts or built bird traps or pitched washers or played Rook or Moon.

And then there was the Meadow Muffin War.

Born out of boredom, it was not actually a war, but a delightful experience. It was an on-again, off-again game, and lasted about two months one memorable summer.

As I recall, the entire group of kids that lived in the community was returning from Galloway Spring, walking through an open field one hot June day: the air was pine sweet and clean, yet somehow heavy, oppressing; it was the kind of day that reminds one of cold lemonade, ice water or buttermilk.

How did the war start? I don't remember now, and I guess it's not important. Someone picked up a dried meadow muffin, otherwise known as a pasture pancake, cow chip or field fritter, and let fly.

In a micro-second, the air was full of flaky pellets. After a time, someone yelled Kings-X and teams were chosen and the war began anew.

At the start of the war, one Army would take position inside the castle — actually the Galloway barn — and the other Army would set seige outside. The chickens and cows were shooed out of the barn and into the fields amid a barrage of corncobs.

Impervious to personal injury that might result from the dusty missle, the invaders — at different times dubbed Goths, Vikings, Caesar's Army or Pancho Villa's Gang — were charged with capturing the castle.

Utilizing a variety of shields, which included a commode lid, a sheet of tin and a section of chicken wire, the invaders either routed the king's guards from the castle or retreated to the safety of the forest to regroup and plan further attacks.

It required a high IQ to figure the trajectory of one of those pancake-flat missles. Riding the air currents like drunken buzzards, the chips would dip, dart, dance, rise, curve and slide — and sometimes boomerang. A direct hit was a rarity, often bring a halt to the fighting to allow time for good-natured cheers and boos.

The Meadow Muffin War has the makin's for a jim-dandy story to relate to my grandchildren some day.

But, with my luck, they probably won't believe me.

Opening lead—♠ K

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Our old friend the unlucky expert really must be the most accident-prone bridge player in the world. Here is another tale of woe.

"I will admit that some people would prefer a one-heart response to my two-club call, but six clubs are a lot better than four hearts. In any case there was nothing wrong with my final three no-trump contract.

"West made his normal lead of the king of spades. I was very happy to see that delightful jack in dummy and won the spade. Then I led a club. Now look what happened to me.

"East slipped on his ace; looked around moonishly and placed the king of hearts on the table. I could find no better play than to take my ace and start on dummy's diamonds since East had effectively put my nice club suit to sleep.

"I would still be home with my contract against any reasonable diamond break, but there was East with five diamonds to the jack-nine. I had to struggle to get out for down one.

"Is anyone as lucky as I am?"

We might well have agreed with him except that any sympathy we expressed would just bring forth more hard luck stories and one at a time is all we can stand. We just remarked, "You weren't too unlucky. Suppose West had gotten off to the lead of a small heart and set you three tricks?"

Soaring and Shining

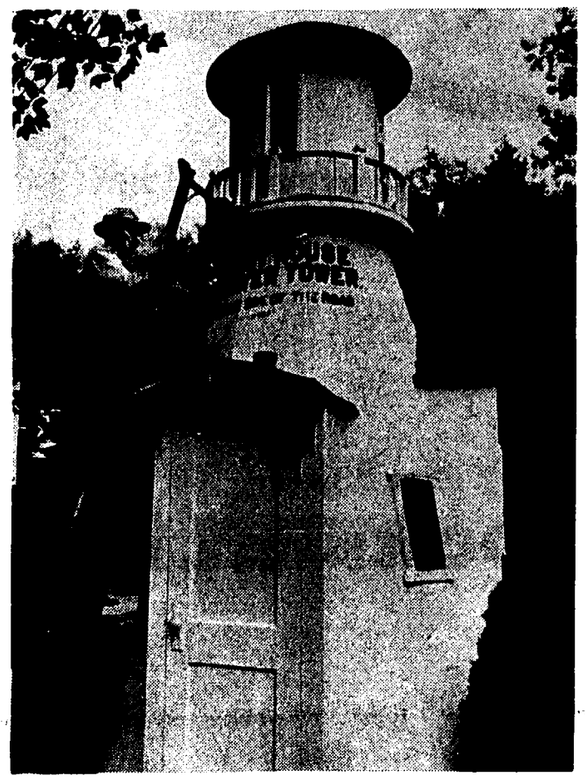

in the California countryside is a structure that may set some sort of record for windows. The home of John Holms of Mill Valley, it consists almost entirely of windows—183 to be exact—some tinted blue, red or pale green to produce a stained-glass effect. Holms, below, scoured junkyards and old homes to put together his house of windows high on a privacy-ensuring hill.

Tower by the Side of the Road dedicated to prayer is the creation of Francis Grisham, retired machinist of Bradford, Pa. Its four windows represent the four gospels. Built, says Grisham, in response to a vision, it serves him as an office, below, in which to answer mail from people who have heard of it and request prayer in time of need.

UP-TO-DATE fashion, Soviet style, is shown off to best advantage by a model in Tallinn, capital of Estonia. The Boot boot-suit costume is designed for vacation wear.

Child's Hair

A child's hair is very fine and should not be treated the same as your own. Rollers, teasing and setting gels should be taboo for a child's hair. You'll help keep that natural shiny head of hair if you make sure your child has a good cut in a manageable style.

The big breast hang-up

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I am 19 years old and am flat as a pancake (breastwise). I've been thinking about taking silicone shots, but I am afraid because there may be some aftereffect. After taking one shot, will I have to take them again? I am ashamed of my body. I even hate to be touched by my boy friend because of what he may think or say about my body. Could you tell me where or what kind of doctor would give these silicone shots?

Dear Reader—The kind of doctor who would give you silicone shots is a bad doctor. It isn't safe. The American Medical Association has taken an official stand against using silicone injections for breast enlargement, not because they are against shapely breasts, but because the injections have caused a number of medical problems, including abscess formation and severe damage to the breast. Successful injections often leave the breast feeling hard without its natural softness. If men preferred shapely stones to smaller, natural-feeling breasts, men might be more attracted to statues than women, heaven forbid! It could be a real rocky situation.

I get many letters from women who either think their breasts are too small or too large or they are unhappy because one is larger than the other. Just why are women so concerned about the size of their breasts? Why? Because men are, of course.

Related to this concern is the individual's "self-image." Our culture has emphasized that the sexually attractive female is amply endowed in the breast department. Hence, if a woman wants to be sexually attractive, and all normal women do, they want an ample bosom. The woman who thinks her breasts are unattractive begins to think of herself in a negative fashion, which can contribute to a neurosis. The self-image is very important in developing self-confidence and, hence, success and happiness. It is not too different from the person with a big nose or the person with short stature. Even imagined physical defects can seriously affect the personality. The correlation of a short stature with personality characteristics labeled as a "Napoleonic complex" has a solid foundation.

Some popular writers have stated that the breast is simply an enlarged sweat gland. Nothing could be further from the truth. The breast is indeed a sex organ. Aside from its function in producing milk, the breasts have a natural part in sex. The nipple contains muscle fibers which contract to cause the nipple literally to have an erection. And the women have nothing on the men in this department; his nipples, too, usually will stand up when stimulated.

The breast is endowed with a large number of specialized nerve fibers. Some of these are responsible for contracting the nipple muscles and producing nipple erection. The woman can obtain a lot of sensuous pleasure from breast stimulation and so can some men. The equipment for this was all installed by nature. And it is there even if you are as "flat as a pancake."

Stimulation of the nipples acts by nerve reflexes which stimulate the master endocrine gland called the pituitary gland just underneath the brain. The pituitary then releases a hormone that causes the woman's uterus to have rhythmic contractions. These may help to propel the sperm up the uterus to fertilize the ovum. That natural instinct a male has to express his interest in the female breast was all planned by nature for a purpose.

At 19—and I assume from your letter that you have not been pregnant—your breasts will most likely enlarge more doing what comes naturally. The breast develops as a result of complex hormone functions. During pregnancy, the breast normally enlarges to prepare to serve its maternal function. The hormones from the placenta that provide circulation for the developing baby are important in further breast development. In this way, pregnancy contributes to breast development.

Even though breast size will decrease after nursing is discontinued or if breast feeding is not carried out, breasts are usually larger than before pregnancy. It takes the cow three pregnancies to achieve her maximum level of milk production and udder size. A young heifer who has never calved just can't expect to compete in that league.

Different breeds and different family characteristics are important. A cow from a breed used for beef won't have a large udder, but a dairy cow will. In other words, like mother, like daughter, and hereditary factors do have an influence on your breastwork.

A large part of the breast is fat. An undernourished woman is likely to have small breasts. The breast is one place where fat deposits are considered desirable, at least from the viewpoint of our breast-conscious society.

Posture and muscle tone count. The breasts sit over the large pectoral muscles across the front of the chest. If these are poorly developed, the breast won't stand out well. The muscular man with well-developed chest muscles sometimes has a muscle mass that would make a good base for a prominent breast, but usually such men have little fat and no breastwork.

The woman who stands straight with her shoulders back throws the wall of the chest forward and accentuates the breast profile. Round shoulders and stooping conceal what nature has given her. Proper exercises improve the bust line. Rotating the arms up, out and back—around and around—helps to strengthen the muscles between the shoulders and improves shoulder posture. Any of the exercises that strengthen these muscles helps with the breast profile. Even light springs or pulleys that can be used to strengthen shoulder muscles can help.

What about hormone creams? Forget them! If a woman is deficient in hormones, she should take pills or shots, otherwise their use is a mistake.

THE GENERATION RAP

—by Helen and Sue Bottel

Male Ego or Female Crush?

HELEN AND SUE:

The first of this year I really flipped over one of my teachers. It wasn't a crush—I just thought he was a great teacher and I wanted to get to know him. Guess I went about it wrong 'cause he got the idea I was chasing him.

He even called my girlfriend into his room and asked her to talk to me about the "crush." Both she and I explained that I wasn't in love with him, and asked if it is wrong to be friends with a teacher.

Then I found out he'd talked to the dean of girls about it, so I only say "Hi" when I see him at summer school, but even now he acts kinda funny and scared of me.

What can I do to convince him I'm not in love with him? I've even tried asking him about his wife. —N.I.L.

N.I.L.:

Every time you look at this teacher his ego probably goes up another notch, so avoid him! You can't be "just friends" with a guy who suspects a "school girl crush" in every "Hi!"—and maybe even enjoys it that way. —SUE.

DEARN.:

When a teacher is so paranoid he discusses a "crush" with other students and the dean, he's got a problem. Whether the problem is you or his imagination—don't make it worse by trying to "convince" him you only want friendship. He's got you pegged for a "flipped-out kid," so put him down as a wipe-out and forget him. —HELEN

DEAR RAP:

I'm going to be 17 this month and I'm really worried. Is something wrong with a girl who can't stand kids? I baby-sit often but I'm not able to show any affection toward the kids. I don't treat them badly, but if they try to hug me I can't stand it. Even if the mother is there, I can't pretend I like them.

My parents never treated me badly. There's no reason for my disliking children. What worries me is if I have babies, will I hate them too? —UNLOVING SITTER

DEAR U.S.:

You aren't unusual. Teenagers often feel uneasy or even unloving around smaller children, this because they're so newly graduated from the "little kid" stage. There's a bit of jealously mixed with a certain distrust—for they may remember back to THEIR days of being pampered and how they took advantage of it.

Also, these youngsters you baby-sit are a "job"; and work that keeps you from fun is seldom wholeheartedly loved.

Don't worry, but DO look for work that pleases you more. —HELEN

DEAR UN:

I doubt if you'll feel this way toward kids of your own, for you'll have the kind of love then that you could never show to children you baby-sit.

Knowing a baby is part of you and the man you love will make YOUR child becutiful and precious. You'll see.

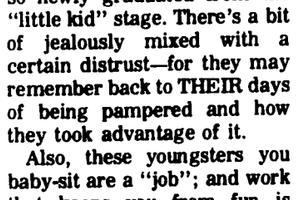

Be patient on the job, 'cuz it's practice for the rough times. Maybe you won't understand about the good times until you share them with your own children. —SUE

DEAR HELEN:

Where did the word "spouse" come from? —ABOUT TO BE ONE

DEAT ATBO:

Dunno; but daughter Kathy says it's got to be a combination of "spice" and "louse." —HELEN

Personal finance

By CARLTON SMITH

Seven out of 10 U.S. families, according to the Investment Company Institute, don't know what a mutual fund is, although around 600 funds are now publicly offered and five million families do own mutual fund shares.

A mutual fund, at the simplest, is a pooling of funds by small investors. If everyone in your neighborhood chipped in $100, and you turned over to an expert the job of investing the common fund, you'd have in effect a mutual fund.

The thing for investors to understand about mutual funds is that they differ widely in investment objectives and, as a result, in the way they behave. We covered that in our last column; now on to some of the elementary features of the funds as investment vehicles.

● Fund shares. When a fund receives your money, it creates (and issues to you) a new share, representing one portion of the total value of the fund's investments. When you want out, you return your share to the fund and are paid whatever a share is then worth—more than you paid, if the stocks owned by the fund have increased in value; less, if they have depreciated. You don't sell your shares; they are "redeemed" by the fund.

● Minimum investment. Varies greatly. Some funds require you to invest at least $200 or more on your initial purchase; it's usually much less on subsequent purchases. Other funds have no minimum requirement. You can start with one share.

● Sales charge—also commission or "load." When funds are sold through brokers or salesforces, typically 8.5 per cent of the investor's payment is deducted to cover sales expenses. Of your $1,000 the "load" will take $85, leaving $915 to be invested in the fund. From your point of view, as investor, that's a commission of 9.3 per cent (85/915ths).

● Bid and asked. Mutual fund prices, as listed on the financial pages, are shown in two columns headed "bid" and "asked" (or "offered")—sometimes "buy" and "sell." If one share of a fund actually represents $12 worth of securities, you'll pay $13.11 for the share—the "asked" price—to provide the 8.5 per cent ($1.11) that's deducted for the sales charge. You get $12 worth of the fund's investments.

● Net asset value per share. That's the $12, above—and what you'd get if you immediately asked the fund to redeem your share. It's the total net value of all the fund's assets, divided by the number of shares outstanding.

● No-load funds. For some funds, the "bid" and "asked" prices will be the same. These funds don't sell through brokers or salesmen and have no sales charge or "load." Send the fund $12 and you've bought $12 worth of investments. Thus, shares are both sold and redeemed at "net asset value."

● Income dividends. A fund owns 10,000 shares of XYZ Corp. The company declares a dividend of 50 cents a share, so the fund receives a dividend check for $5,000. This is divided among the stockholders, so much per share.

● Capital gains distributions. The fund bought its 10,000 shares of XYZ for $20 a share and now it decides to sell the stock for $30 a share. The profit or capital gain of $100,000 is again apportioned among the shareholders, so much per share. You can take it in cash or (as with dividends) arrange to have the fund automatically apply it toward buying more shares in the fund.

The volume of the sun is about 1.3 million times that of Earth.

Orioles score 3-2 victory over Tigers

"All I said," Billy Martin was explaining, "was he's gonna get Tigeritis against us the next time he's in Detroit." Instead, the Tigers came down with a severe case of Dobsonitis.

Because of the Detroit manager's comment, Pat Dobson said, doing a little explaining of his own, "I wanted to win that game more than any game I ever pitched."

And he did just that. The tall right-hander tossed a four-hitter while the Baltimore Orioles, taking advantage of some Detroit ineptitude in the field, scored a 3-2 victory Friday night to slice the Tigers' lead in the American League East to a single game.

In the rest of the American League, Texas turned back California 7-3, the New York Yankees edged Cleveland 1-0, the Chicago White Sox defeated Oakland 6-5 in 11 innings, Minnesota beat Kansas City 2-0 and Milwaukee's game at Boston was rained out.

In the National League, the Chicago Cubs defeated Pittsburgh 4-3, the New York Mets trimmed Montreal 7-3, Cincinnati lost to San Diego 4-3 in 13 innings, Houston bowed to Atlanta 5-2, San Francisco trounced Los Angeles 8-4 and St. Louis downed Philadelphia 4-1.

Martin, who has embroiled himself in more than his share of baseball feuds, began this one with that "Tigeritis" comment a week ago, when the Tigers played in Baltimore—and he also suggested his players "would rattle the seats with homers" when they got a shot at Dobson.

Willie Horton managed to rattle a few in the left field stands with his sixth home run in the second inning. But that barely made up for a misplay which paved the way to two Baltimore runs in the first.

The birds got only six hits against Detroit, one of them a gift compliments of Horton.

After a two-out infield single in the first inning, the Tiger left fielder misplayed Boog Powell's fly ball, which sailed over his head for a run-scoring double. Brooks Robinson then doubled Powell home.

And in the fifth, Don Buford struck out but reached first when catcher Bill Freehan was charged with a passed ball. John Oates' single and Bobby Grich's double-play grounder then produced what proved to be the winning run.

A walk, a sacrifice and Roy White's two-out single in the bottom of the ninth gave the Yanks their victory over Cleveland's 12-game winner, Gaylord Perry.

The White Sox bombed 11-game winner Ken Holtzman out with a five-run outburst in the first inning, three of them coming on Dick Allen's 14th homer.

But after watching the lead disappear, they pulled out the victory over the A's on Mike Andrews' bases-loaded walk.

Successive homers by Ted Ford and Larry Biittner in the fifth inning led the Rangers' attack against the Angels.

Unbeaten Ray Corbin notched his fourth victory with a six-hitter and Bob Darwin and Eric Soderholm slapped run-scoring singles in the seventh inning to lead the Twins past the Royals.

Ted Williams: the splinter no longer

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—He admits without a struggle (the mirror has already struck the final blow) that he is no longer the Splendid Splinter. But he emphatically (with trace of smile) pronounces that he has not changed otherwise.

"Well," Ted Williams pauses, hedges, putting his stockinged feet back up on his desk in the Texas Rangers' manager's small office, "maybe a little. It was 10, maybe 15 years ago that I began to have compassion for writers. I mean, that they had a job to do, too. That they had families and had to earn a living.

"But I still got this." He picked up a copy of an American League rule book and read the part that says reporters may come into a clubhouse only with the permission of the manager. He laughed and brandished the book like a hammer. "You know, I enjoy talking to writers now. Some things do change."

Don Mincher the first baseman for the Texas Rangers poked his head in the door. "Ted, I'd like you to meet Michael. He's one of our biggest fans," said Mincher. "Michael's had some back trouble, but he's doing fine now." Michael wore a Rangers baseball cap and a brace that could be seen reaching around his neck from under his shirt.

Williams rose from his chair quickly and young Michael appeared a little tree between two tall oaks. "Good to see you, Michael," said Williams, in that clear, strong John Wayne voice. They shook hands. "Keep doin' fine." (To Mincher) "Get him a bat, will ya, Don? Michael oughta have a bat."

One could quickly size up Williams, standing there, capless, in short-sleeve sweatshirt, knickers, stockings with blue stirrups. Natural with a youngster; his eyes crinkly and his smile warm.

Ted Williams

His hair is cut short and one wonders if it isn't so to conceal the increasing grayness, just as on even the hottest days he wears a warm-up jacket to shroud his paunch.

If it weren't for the massive atmosphere of the man, his neck and arms could be described as beefy. But he appears lithe—because of his animated talk that combines arms waving, hands darting with descriptive groans, grunts and other sound effects.

He sat back down and began to lace on his rubber-soled baseball shoes. ("Spikes" were for a time past.)

"Ted," a writer asked him, "do you think you could still hit .300?"

Williams, who had a lifetime batting average of .344, the last man to hit over .400 (.406 in 1941), has been retired as an active player since 1960 when, incredibly, at age 42, he batted .316 with 29 homers.

He took the question seriously, but did not hesitate.

"No," he said. "I can still make contact, but I've lost the power.

"I got into the batting cage only once this season. It was an off-day in Baltimore. I took about 10 pitches and didn't miss a swing. But when I hit the ball, nothing startling happened.

"I think I can hit the ball about 350 feet now, but that's about all.

"I liked the feel in the box, the digging in. Now, though, a 33-ounce bat feels like it's got weight. Once it was like a feather in my hands."

Williams says he does not exercise any more.

"What would I be trying to prove?" he asked rhetorically.

He does haphazardly try to watch his weight. He tried a big rubber belt around his middle for awhile. But it burst in public and he had to wiggle to keep it up and he said the hell with it.

"I also don't drink 12 chocolate milk shakes a day like I used to," he said.

One morning not long ago, he had a scare. He had a dizzy spell. His wife demanded he get to a doctor. After a full series of tests, he was found to be in fine health. "No cholesterol," he said. "That's good. Maybe it was from drinking so much orange juice over the years. I used to squeeze and squeeze the oranges in Florida during all those spring trainings."

He patted his ample stomach. "Do I look any older than a man of 54?" he wondered aloud.

Nervous Cubs whip Pirates

It was nervous-nervous time for the Chicago Cubs Friday night. Joe Pepitone—remember him?—got the shakes before the Cubs' 4-3 victory over Pittsburgh and Rick Reuschel—a name to remember—joined him in the late innings.

"I haven't been that nervous since the seventh game of the 1964 World Series," said Pepitone, returning to action for the first time since April after two months on the voluntarily retired list.

Reuschel's first game in the majors was less than two weeks ago. He won it in relief and has won two subsequent starts.

"I was listening to the game on the radio and you bet I was nervous," the 6-foot-3, 230-pound right-hander said as he stretched out on a table in the locker room with ice packs on his back and ankle. He blanked the hard-hitting Pirates on two hits for 7 1-3 innings before the ankle-back combination forced him out and relievers Dan McGinn and Jack Aker blew most of a 4-0 lead.

In the American League, Baltimore defeated Detroit 3-2, Texas turned back California 7-3, the New York Yankees edged Cleveland 1-0, the Chicago White Sox defeated Oakland 6-5 in 11 innings, Minnesota beat Kansas City 2-0 and Milwaukee's game at Boston was rained out.

While the third-place Cubs climbed within 3½ games of Pittsburgh, the New York Mets trimmed Montreal 7-3 and pulled within three percentage points of the Pirates in the National League East. In the West, Cincinnati lost to San Diego 4-3 in 13 innings and Houston bowed to Atlanta 5-2 so the Reds remained one-half game in front of the Astros. Elsewhere, San Francisco trounced Los Angeles 8-4 and St. Louis downed Philadelphia 4-1.

Billy Williams, who drove in the Cubs' first run with a sacrifice fly, cracked a two-run double in the sixth inning and scored what proved to be the winning run on Rick Monday's single.

Reuschel's injury problems started on a play at first base in the seventh inning.

"I hurt a tendon in my ankle covering first," he said. "I was nursing the ankle a little bit and that's when I started to feel a little pain in my back. I asked to be taken out when I started to feel a little dizzy."

Pepitone singled his first time and then hit three hard fly balls, all caught.

The Mets jumped on Montreal rookie Balor Moore for four runs in the first inning—two walks, Jim Fregosi's single, Cleon Jones' two-run double and Jim Beauchamp's sacrifice fly—and got their final run in the ninth on Willie Mays' 649th career homer. Tim Foli and John Boccabella homered for the Expos before Danny Frisella saved the victory for Jon Matlack with three shutout innings of relief.

The Reds and Padres struggled through 10 scoreless innings before each team scored twice in the 11th and once in the 12th. In the 13th, the Padres loaded the bases on Dave Roberts' double, a walk and Nate Colbert's single.

Clarence Gaston grounded to third baseman Darrel Chaney, whose throw to the plate forced Roberts. But catcher Johnny Bench threw the relay trying for a double play past first base, allowing Lee to score.

Wayne Simpson pitched no-hit ball for Cincinnati for six innings and right fielder Cesar Geronimo, a seventh-inning defensive replacement, threw two San Diego runners out at the plate and tripled home the Reds' two runs in the 11th.

The Reds didn't lose any ground, however, when Atlanta scored three runs in the ninth on Ralph Garr's double, Hank Aaron's RBI single and Earl Williams' second homer of the game to beat the Astros. Mike Lum also homered for the Braves; Bob Watson and Jim Wynn homered for Houston.

The Giants supported Ron Bryant with a barrage of extra-base hits, including home runs by Chris Speier, Jimmy Howarth—his first in the majors—and Tito Fuentes, and turned back the stumbling Dodgers. Wes Parker and Chris Cannizzaro connected for the losers, with Parker's two-run shot in the sixth ending Bryant's string of 23 consecutive scoreless innings.

The red-hot Cardinals made it three in a row, 10 of 11 and 18 of 24 by beating the Phillies behind Scipio Spinks' five-hit pitching. Jose Cruz homered for the first St. Louis run and Lou Brock hammered a run-scoring triple. Joe Lis homered for the Phils.

Hope Auto tames Lions

In Little League play last night at K-Park Hope Auto won over Lions by a score of ten to eight, in the first game and the second game was won by James Mtr. Co. beating Green-Ellis 11 to 2.

Rufus Herndon was the pitcher for Hope Auto. Lion's used Johnny Vickers, Kenny Newton and Preston Walker on the mound. Leading all hitters for the winners was Mike Metzger collecting one single, one double with Jim Henley hitting his home run. Second Britt Henry, Jacky Cooley and Johnny Vickers were the leading hitters for the losers getting one hit a piece. Vicker's hit was his second home run of the season.

In the second game of the evening Bruce Hunt was the pitcher for James Mtr. Co. and Steve Jones and Billy Brown saw mound duty for Greening-Ellis. Hitter for the winners was Steve Bank going 4 for 5 and the best hitters for the losers was Paul Luker getting one hit at one time up.

On Friday, July 7th, the games will be Barry's vs Greening-Ellis at 6:30 p.m. and Hope Auto vs CBC in the second game of the night.

Ramos may lose title

MADRID (AP) — The Spanish Boxing Federation asked the World Boxing Council today to deprive Mando Ramos of the WBC lightweight championship because a dope test he took had proved positive.

Ramos, of Los Angeles, won the title with a close 15-round decision over Spain's Pedro Carrasco in Madrid Wednesday night. After the fight Ramos and Carrasco took urine tests before a team of doctors from the Spanish Federation.

The Spanish Federation informed the president of the WBC, Ramon G. Velazquez, in Mexico of the result of the test and asked the WBC to change the result and declare the Spaniard the winner and new titleholder.

JUNIORS PLAY PROS

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The Insurance Youth Golf Classic will be held at the Crestview Country Club in Wichita, Aug. 4 through 8.

The event, sponsored by the National Association of Insurance Agents, will feature 20 touring golf pros against 150 of the nation's best junior golfers.

The 60 surviving juniors of the first two rounds will play against pro teams the final two days. The pros will be playing for $40,000.

Bobby Lee Hunter and the Olympic spirit

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Grumblingly, Willi Daume, president of the Olympic Organizing Committee, and Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, are interpreting the standards and ideals by which men must live.

These two men bravely carry a heavy burden, as their gilt-edged, self-righteous, inflated and flatulent positions indicate.

They are in charge of the 1972 Olympics in Munich and are virtually on their hands and knees in squint-eyed hunt for the least bit of taint.

Lo and behold, they found one. His name is Bobby Lee Hunter. Herr Duame and Mr. Brundage don't want him in their Olympics.

Bobby Lee is training for a spot on the U.S. Olympic boxing team. His problem, as far as the pair of gloomy, betitled, self-deified gentlemen are concerned, is that Bobby Lee is a convict. While this satisfies his amateur requirements (obviously he is receiving no money under the bars), it does not satisfy the domicile requirements as interpreted by Herr Daume and Mr. Brundage.

"An Olympic athlete should be an example to youth," pronounced Daume. Mr. Brundage added that "each participant must have adhered to the Olympic spirit."

Now, it is true that few people would want their kiddies to grow up lionizing a 22-year-old black man who is serving his sixth year of an 18-year sentence for manslaughter.

But it is also true that our jails are ideally supposed to be places for rehabilitation, for making a man "see the light."

"It's like a onetime sinner who gets religion." said Jesse Owens, former Olympic star. "Do you hold his past against him now that he is doing the Lord's work?"

If there is such a thing as rehabilitation, then Bobby Lee Hunter is a bright example of it, according to Arthur Lentz, head of the United States Olympic Committee. But Lentz is at the mercy of Brundage's decree.

"Maybe the idea of a man overcoming a mistake—and we all make mistakes—is something that youth should look up to," said Lentz.

In any event, Bobby Lee Hunter appears the ideal prisoner. He has been so clean that the warden of the Manning Correctional Institution in South Carolina has allowed Bobby to train daily at a nearby school—with a guard accompanying him—to travel with the guard, to the Pan-Am Games in Cali, Colombia (where he won a bronze medal), to travel with a U.S. team to Moscow, and also to fight in AAU tournaments (he is the current flyweight champ).

The youth of Colombia, Russia and even the United States have been, at last report, hardly sullied by Hunter's noxious presence.

"What's hard to define," said Arthur Lentz, "is just what an example for our youth is."

Should it be the drug users who are so prevalent among Olympians? For example, 1968 decathlon winner Bill Toomey said, "I didn't take drugs during the Mexico City Olympics to get ahead of my competition, but to stay even with it."

Should it be the so-called amateurs who take money from certain advertisers and benefactors? "Hardly one of us," said Susan Chaffee, former Olympic medal-winning skier, "is a true amateur. We couldn't eat if we were."

Or should youth look up to someone like Mr. Brundage, who in 1936, at the time of the Olympic Games in Berlin, was sage enough to observe that "no nation since ancient Greece has captured the true Olympic spirit as has Germany." He said it above the boom of goose-stepping jackboots.

BOBBY LEE HUNTER is escorted to the ring by a Pan-American Games official at Cali, Colombia, last July.

Or should youth look up with star-gazed eyes to Herr Daume, a German with a starkly short memory.

Herr Daume, it would seem, should be painfully aware of rehabilitation. After all, his country is still literally paying its war debt in financial reparations to European countries and to Israel. Also, thousands of individuals all over the world still receive monthly checks from the German government for the "tyranny suffered at the hands of the Nazis."

If the Olympics can go back to Germany, then Bobby Lee Hunter can go to the Olympics.
